Whitening, for example, is the process that will render the teeth whiter or at least make it appear whiter. There are 2 ways that can achieve this. One is actually changing the natural tooth color, making it whiter. Bleaching products contain peroxide which not only removes surface or extrinsic discoloration but also acts to penetrate the deep or intrinsic stains. On the other hand, non-bleaching products only have agents that only remove surface stains by chemical or physical action. One thing that should not be used to treat scalp acne is any product that contains benzoyl peroxide. That's because when peroxide comes into contact with hair, it can change the color of the hair and result in a less-than-desirable look. Those who have chemically-textured hair for example those with perms or color-treated hair are most prone to hair trouble when benzoyl peroxide comes into contact with hair.
